Oaxaca: Sierra Norte to the Pacific

January 15-27, February 10-22,
March 11-23, April 4-16, May 1-13
$2949

This exciting 12-day journey combines discovering the indigenous markets and colonial architecture of Oaxaca, with active adventure: hiking through remote mountain villages in the Sierra Norte, exploring some of the renowned archeological sights of the Zapotec and Mixtec cultures, and basking in the luscious warmth of Mexico's Southwestern tropical coast.

We begin our journey in colorful and vivacious Oaxaca, where we explore markets, galleries, cafés, and the narrow streets of this colonial city. We then depart for several days of hiking in the untouched Sierra Norte, where the local Zapotec communities have set up a remote system of trails and cabins as part of a sustainable development initiative. The trip ends at a stunning eco-lodge on the Pacific coast. Here we relax and enjoy an array of activities, including kayaking, snorkeling, surfing, deep-sea fishing, scuba diving, and sailing.

Yucatan Peninsula: Mayan Adventure

Year-round departures
$1879

This 8-day hiking, kayaking, and beach tour combines history, culture, and adventure. We explore the vibrant mangroves and forests of the Yucatan Peninsula by kayak and on foot, and visit colonial towns, local villages, and ancient Mayan ruins nestled in lush jungles. We stay in an elegant hacienda and in rustic but luxurious beachside cabanas. There is ample time to swim, snorkel, kayak, and stroll the powdery white sand beaches of the Caribbean.

When is the best time to visit Mexico?

Mexico's distinct regions each have their own seasonal weather, depending on altitude and proximity to the coast. Generally, rain falls and temperatures rise from June through October, making November through May the more temperate, drier season.
